New £9.1m primary school for Harlow

Council leader hails 'another piece in the jigsaw of very bright future for town'

By Sam Meadows

sam.meadows@hertsessexnews.co.uk

A NEW £9.1 million primary school is "another piece of the jigsaw" in Harlow's future, according to its council leader.

The school, set to be built on the Newhall estate, will accommodate 420 children, while an accompanying early-years nursery will cater for 56 more children.

The facility is part of Essex County Council's biggest ever education programme, unveiled on Monday, which will create 2,500 school places in the next financial year.

And Harlow Council leader Jon Clempner welcomed the decision.

He said: "There is a recognition by all the authorities involved that for Harlow to achieve its potential, and to continue the vision of Sir Frederick Gibberd, we need to address the complicated mix of provision of jobs, infrastructure, housing and skills.

Commitment

"This of course includes ensuring that there is the right provision of school places as new houses get built.

"I welcome Essex County Council delivering on the commitment for a new primary school in Newhall. This is another piece of the jigsaw for what I see as a very bright future for Harlow in the coming years."

LOOKING AHEAD: The new primary school will be able to accommodate 420 children

Councillor John Spence, County Hall's cabinet member for finance, said: "Our policy is, if you build houses then you need the schools.

"We are creating 2,500 new school places. We've already created 8,000 and will continue to do so."

He added: "We have seen the number of schools which are rated 'good' and 'outstanding' by Ofsted rise to 91 per cent and we will continue to spend money improving them."

The project will be funded by the county council's £263 million capital programme.

This will include £85 million spread out over five years to provide 400 new special school places.

Mr Spence said he was "proud" to be part of an administration

BACKING: Cllr Jon Clempner, leader of Harlow Council

NEEDS MUST: Cllr John Spence

which was putting money into providing places for those with special educational needs.

The school at Newhall is expected to take its first intake of students in September 2018.

FOURTH FROM BOTTOM: Greater Anglia was one of the lowest scoring franchise holders in the survey

Railway passengers are less than 40% happy with service

Which? survey reveals low satisfaction rates

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsexnews.co.uk

GREAT Northern and Greater Anglia have both recorded satisfaction rates of less than 40 per cent in a Which? survey.

Using data provided by hundreds of commuters, the consumer charity gathered an average score for each franchise holder based on overall satisfaction and likelihood of recommendation.

Thameslink – Great Northern finished third bottom with a satisfaction score of 32 per cent. Greater Anglia finished fourth from bottom with 35 per cent.

This was above only Southeastern (31 per cent) and Southern (21 per cent), the latter having been crippled by strike action.

Merseyrail topped the chart with 72 per cent, but it is worth noting only 33 people responded about the firm.

A spokesman for Govia Thameslink Railway, which runs Great Northern, said: "Performance is unacceptable and we are sincerely sorry.

"Our passengers deserve better and, together with Network Rail and its £300 million funding package to improve track signalling and overall performance, we're working hard to improve the service."

Delays

He added that knock-on delays from London Bridge redevelopment, signal failures and bad weather were reasons why the service performed poorly.

Jamie Burles, managing director of Greater Anglia, said: "We are committed to further improving the service we offer to our customers, by making our trains more reliable and comfortable for passengers.

"We listen to our customers and respond to what they want."

He said the firm is committed to spending an additional £5 million for more trains to hit the lines with 4,000 more seats provided on main line routes.

Mr Burles added: "Many of our customers have told us they welcome the improvements we have made to date, but we recognise there is still much more we can do to make our service better."

Great Northern, which serves Hertford North, scored: Two (stars out of five) for punctuality, two for reliability, two for seat availability, two for standing space, one for frequency, one for carriages, two for toilets and two for value for money.

Greater Anglia, which serves Harlow, Bishop's Stortford and Hertford East stations scored: Two (stars out of five) for punctuality, two for reliability, two for seat availability, two for standing space, three for frequency, one for carriages, two for toilets and two for value for money.

Greater Anglia 'delighted' after Japanese investment announced

GREATER Anglia has agreed to sell 40 per cent of its franchise to a Japanese construction company.

The partnership is pending final regulatory approvals and fulfils the objective of operator Abellio to find a suitable partner to run Greater Anglia in a 60/40 venture.

Abellio and Mitsui already have a working relationship, having first entered into a joint venture to bid for the West Midlands rail franchise in 2016, along with the East Japan Railway Company.

Abellio feels that Mitsui is best placed to help deliver its programme to improve the Greater Anglia franchise.

Mitsui is a global business with interests in infrastructure, integrated transportation systems, energy, and IT and communications.

The deal marks the first time a Japanese company has become a shareholder of a British train operating company.

Objective

Dominic Booth, managing director of Abellio, said: "We are delighted to have reached agreement with Mitsui, fulfilling our long-standing objective of running the franchise as a 60/40 joint venture.

"With the introduction of Mitsui's knowledge and experience, we look forward to delivering significant improvements for Greater Anglia's customers, including through the introduction of a brand new fleet."

A £1.4 billion investment has already been agreed between Abellio and the Department of Transport over the next nine years.

Greater Anglia will also introduce a new fleet and a commitment to cut average journey times by ten per cent.

It provides intercity, commuter and rural services throughout Broxbourne and from London, up to Hertford, Harlow and Bishop's Stortford, including the Stansted Express service. It is responsible for almost 2,800 employees, operates 1,300 train services per day and serves 132 stations.

IN BRIEF

Blue plaques for legends of town

TWO blue plaques will be installed in Harlow to honour former residents Sam Deards and Douglas Hayter.

Stan Newens, recently re-elected chairman of Harlow Civic Society, said wheels are in motion to mark their lives although nothing has yet been finalised.

Under proposals Mr Deards, who invented the mechanical cricket scoreboard in the 1900s, will have a plaque on his former house in Park Hill, Old Harlow.

The society hope to place a plaque on the former home Mr Hayter, who founded Hayter Lawn Mowers after the Second World War in Spellbrook, and lived in Mulberry Green, Harlow.

Lottery rollover

THE latest draw of St Clare Hospice's lottery has left two players better off but the jackpot will rollover another week.

A resident of Harlow won £1,000 with the winning number 32432 while a Bishop's Stortford individual won £75 with the ticket number 22794.

Based in Hastingwood, St Clare is a charity which cares for people and their families who are affected by life limiting illnesses.

To join the lottery visit www.stclarehospice.org.uk or call the St Clare lottery team on 01279 7737730.

Square discussed

A MEMBER of The Square's management said the venue will be a huge loss to Harlow in an interview on BBC Radio Essex.

Adam Smith, part of the SquareOne Entertainment board, also discussed The Square's future with the Fourth Avenue site set to be built upon.

"It will be a massive disaster for the town to lose it permanently," he said.

"When developers put in their application it was rejected by the planning committee of Harlow Council but that was overturned.

"We have been looking at options but nothing has come to light yet."

Mayer slams May

ALEX Mayer, member of European Parliament for the East of England, said she is angry with Theresa May's EU speech.

The Labour MEP commented on Tuesday after the Prime Minister clarified her Brexit wishlist.

Ms Mayer said: "I am angry because during the referendum hustings I mentioned some of the benefits of our membership of the European Union, like membership of the single market.

"To this Leave campaigners just replied that we could negotiate to keep that part.

"But it is clear the new Tory plan now leaves that idea in tatters."

Taser incident

A YOUNG man is believed to have brandished a Taser outside McDonald's in Staple Tye, Harlow.

Officers are searching for the youth following a disturbance near the eatery around 9.50pm on Sunday, January 1.

Nine males, aged 17 to 20, were involved in the incident. The suspect believed to have carried a Taser is described as white, of medium build, with brown hair that is short on the sides and longer on top.

Family comes together for gran with diabetes

Maxine keen to raise awareness of condition despite failing health

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsessexnews.co.uk

A GRANDMOTHER of ten has held an emotional farewell party for friends and family as her health deteriorates.

Maxine Venables, 58, of Taylifers, Harlow, has kidney failure, nerve damage and has limited vision from her 20-year battle with Type 2 diabetes.

On Friday she met friends and family members in Paringdon Sports and Social Club, Paringdon Road, Harlow, to celebrate her life and raise awareness of her condition.

Mrs Venables, a mother to four, has said she wants to raise awareness of diabetes to help other people to avoid her fate.

Her daughter Donna Venables, 35, of Riley Mews, Harlow, said: "It was a bittersweet occasion. It was so nice to see everybody but it did take her being poorly to make it happen."

"It was such a good night out, she (Maxine) was overwhelmed. She had a fantastic time and really enjoyed it."

Rock band Triple X played for the family, and students of Harlow College performed a dance routine while a raffle was held with all donations going to charity Diabetes UK.

Valuable

Family friend Tara Grant also completed a sponsored headshave to bring the total of donations to £1,421, but just as valuable was the family's time together.

Donna continued: "Mum said she wanted to have a big party and that she wanted to raise awareness."

"She said that if she could help just one family then she wanted to do it. I thought it was a really nice thing to do."

"It is a bit of a weird situation."

Type 2 diabetes, the most common kind, is a condition that causes a person's blood sugar level to become too high.

This can lead the body to not produce enough insulin or the cells to not respond to insulin. Those with diabetes need to be careful about what they eat and lead a healthy lifestyle.

Mrs Venables was diagnosed with diabetes when less was known about the condition.

Donna said: "She (Maxine) has not worked for a long time. Her eyes are really bad, she is partially sighted."

"When she first got diagnosed it was not a big thing, the doctor just told her to avoid loads of sugar. She did not know about a lot of those things (that she knows now)."

Mrs Venables' other children, Stacey, 36, Lindsey, 29, and Tom, 27, were also at the gathering while their mother also has one great grandchild.

Wedding

Tom has actually brought his wedding forward to ensure that Mrs Venables will be able to come.

Donna said she is not sure what the future holds for them. Her mother is currently stable in her condition, but her health could rapidly deteriorate at any time.

"We are just taking each day as it comes," said Donna. "She could be fine for six months or just six weeks, we do not know."

"We are really close and we are really supportive of each other."

For the meal and raffle prizes the family wish to thank: Willetts Streak House, DJC Entertainment, Essex Smiles, Custom INK, Cannons Brook, Beefeater, Pottery Arms, OCD Cleaning, Quaser Elite, Garden Of India, Indian Balti, Wings Of Light, Mr Luigi's Tiaras, Tina's Tubs, Little Cows Sweet Shop and Rose Cupcakery.

Town CAB: Put money aside for a happy year

CITIZENS Advice Harlow has shared eight top tips to save money in January, which is statistically the month people make most financial decisions.

The centre in East Gate, Harlow, is anticipating a rise in visits as people experience squeezed budgets and worry about debt after Christmas.

Tiziana Groom, chief executive of Citizens Advice Harlow, said: "January is a great time to take stock of your finances and think about your priorities for the future."

"Although many will focus on their next pay cheque people can use the time to review whether they can save money on their bills or set a savings goal."

The eight pieces of advice are:

- Do a simple budget: Write down your income and take away your essential bills such as gas and electric, food and transport. If you have money left over, plan in advance what else you will spend or save
- Save money on essentials: Individuals can save an average £300 on an energy bill by changing tariff or supplier
- Check you are claiming the right benefits: If you have a family or are married, check if you can apply for working tax credits or marriage tax allowance on gov.co.uk
- Start saving: Every penny put aside will improve your finances
- Keep tabs on your overdraft: Sign up to free text alerts from your bank so you know when you're close to going into your overdraft
- Be choosy about your borrowing: It is important to know there are different offers with credit cards and loans, from free balance transfers to paying no interest for a few months
- Get your debts in order: If you cannot pay your debts all at once, it is important to prioritise
- Invest in your future: Pensions are a great way to save for your future and good value as contributions are topped up by your employer
- For more information call Citizens Advice on 03444 770808

HARLOW IS 70: Labour councillor reveals her favourite things about the town

Share what makes your town great

TO celebrate Harlow turning 70 in 2017, readers have been getting in touch to share their favourite thing about the town.

Over the next few editions we hope to collate 70 comments from readers.

Here are our first two:

1. Ron Kingsmill, 54, of Mark Hall, Harlow.

"I like that it was designed around the concept of local communities. As well as people reporting to the centre of town there is something that can help them locally. That was the idea in the original design. We lost it a bit in the 1980s but there has been a return as we have seen people rallying around The Stow, which is my local hatch.

"I have lived in different places around the town and I have always appreciated the community."

2. Ron Bill, of Upper Park, Harlow.

"For me it is the Gibberd Gallery. We struggled for many years to get an art gallery. I think it is a great place and they do good shows."

Beauty of town park certainly takes some beating

A HARLOW Labour councillor has revealed that two of her favourite things about the town are the Town Park and the community's strong sense of justice.

Jean Clark shared her thoughts on the town as part of the Star's series celebrating 70 years of Harlow.

"I've always loved Gibberd's concept of built-up communities, separated by green wedges and green fingers," she said.

"It's lovely to see the crocus banks in spring and magnificent avenues of trees in autumn."

Lucky

Yet it was when Ms Clark was diagnosed as diabetic that she realised her love for Harlow Town Park.

She continued: "I'm so lucky to live near the town park.

"When first diagnosed diabetic, I was encouraged to walk after meals. That's when I really discovered the beauty of the park, whatever the season.

"And within the park, Pets Corner has dedicated staff and

LOVE: Jean discovered the beauty of Harlow Town Park after she was diagnosed as diabetic massive community support from generation to generation.

Following a recent visit to the park, Ms Clark, said: "Volunteers were gardening, as they do every week, in the pouring cold rain, drenched to the skin.

"But that is part of what I like about Harlow, its generous community spirit."

She added: "Over the years,

Harlow has exploded if residents think their community facilities are under threat. We would unite in protest to save our services.

"If something is wrong, Harlow will respond, as at the Stow recently.

"I like that about Harlow: a strong sense of justice."

BEST IN TOWN: Sue Livings, deputy chairman of Harlow Council, collects the HADA award for Orchard Croft (left) from Stan Newens

Best buildings given the first design award gongs

Architectural excellence at Orchard Croft and Pearson buildings

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsessexnews.co.uk

ORCHARD Croft and the Pearson building were crowned the town's best constructions at the Harlow Architectural Design Awards (HADAs).

The inaugural awards on Tuesday, which also served as the annual general meeting for Harlow Civic Society, were held at the new clubhouse at Harlow Cricket Club in Chippingfield.

Star readers played a key role in voting for the winning buildings which were ultimately selected by a panel of judges.

The Pearson building, in Edinburgh Gate, Harlow, won the non-residential award and Orchard Croft numbers 3-12 and 161-165 won the residential gong.

Paul McLintic, member of Harlow Civic Society and event organiser, said: "It has been a very interesting project.

"It started nearly a year ago, we wanted to do something positive and on the plus side for Harlow. "Everybody has been positive about it. I cannot tell you how many sent in an application, but it was more than 300 votes for the buildings.

"I think the best buildings won. The Pearson building is the stand-out non-residential building but there are many good contenders, some of them are hidden away.

"Orchard Croft is very much Harlow. It is well positioned and has a crescent shape to it. It overlooks the green space."

He added: "We are going to do this for ten years. Harlow is going through a growth spurt with so many things going on."

Trophies

Stan Newens, chairman of Harlow Civic Society and the town's first MP, presented glass trophies to a chosen representative for each building.

The Pearson building was designed by Conran Roche. Paul Zara of architecture firm Conran and Partners collected the award on his behalf.

He said: "This project was very important for us. At the time it was the UK's greenest office building, it is quite radical. It is ageing very gracefully. We are very proud of it and to get this award 20 years after it was completed is a great honour."

The non-residential shortlist also featured Harlow College Building C, the Owens-Illinois building, Harlow Playhouse and St Thomas More Roman Catholic Church.

Sue Livings, deputy chairman of Harlow Council, collected the award for Orchard Croft. The complex was designed by Sir Frederick Gibberd and Harlow Design Group.

Subsequent HADAs will honour the best buildings constructed in Harlow in the preceding year. The project is sponsored by housing association Places For People.

Most A&E patients at Lister are 'satisfied'

MOST patients visiting A&E at the Lister Hospital were satisfied despite the soaring number of people being admitted.

According to the hospital's friends and family test, which anonymously asks for feedback after visits, 85 per cent of patients would recommend the hospital to someone else.

Director of nursing Liz Lees said: "I appreciate there are going to be people who had a bad experience at the hospital. "But on the whole the response is very positive."

Admissions

Over the Christmas and new year period there were 14 per cent more hospital admissions at Lister than the previous year.

From January 1-15 there were 350 extra patients at the trust's two centres. Its chief executive Nick Carver said the rise was probably down to an aging and growing population, adding: "Waiting times, while not meeting the national standard, have been better than last year."

"We clearly recognise that this winter patients waited longer to be treated and we regret that, but admitting 14 per cent more patients something has to give."

HOSPITALS UNDER PRESSURE: Patients reveal their experience

Dying woman 'was left on A&E trolley for five hours'

AS the temperature continues to fall the NHS has been gripped by a winter crisis. How are our hospitals in Harlow and Stevenage bearing up under the pressure? Chief reporter Sam Meadows investigates...

A DYING woman with cancer was left on a trolley for five hours, and a little girl was told she would have to travel more than 100 miles for treatment.

Both Princess Alexandra Hospital (PAH) in Harlow and the Lister Hospital in Stevenage declared an OPEL 3 – the equivalent of a red alert – at accident and emergency (A&E) on multiple occasions at the weekend. The PAH also declared a 'black alert' on December 13.

Responding to a survey on this paper's website, many patients reported severe waiting times and issues with treatment.

One respondent from Stotfold, who did not leave their name, attended A&E at the Lister. They wrote: "My mother had cancer and was left on a trolley for five hours, she was examined in the corridor behind temporary boards. She passed away two days later."

And a woman from Bishop's Stortford who was sent to A&E in Harlow by her GP after her daughter developed cellulitis told us the lack of hospital beds meant she was told her six-year-old would have to be admitted in Great Yarmouth – 104 miles away.

She said: "She is six and she has never stayed in hospital before, let alone us having to travel two-and-a-half hours on a Friday night."

Understaffed

"She had got herself into a complete state. She was in pain and had an IV in. I can't fault the staff there, it's not their fault and they did all they could do."

"They were understaffed and it was so busy in there. They were really kind and good with my daughter."

"I can't fault the NHS with the services they provide, but it's coming from higher up."

A woman from Little Hadham,

ALERTS: Princess Alexandra Hospital in Harlow

who wished to remain anonymous, said she had visited A&E three times last year with her mother.

"On one occasion we arrived at half past four in the morning and we were still there when the staff were coming back for the next night shift," she said.

"Another time she was left in a cubical overnight and basically abandoned."

"She had wet herself and everything, it was terrible."

She said she had emailed the chief executive of the Princess Alexandra Hospital Trust after her complaints fell on deaf ears.

Mark Stone, 42, who lives in Standon, visited the hospital with his 67-year-old mother.

He said: "There was a queue of ambulances out of the door and when I arrived my mum was still kept on an ambulance trolley for about 45 minutes."

"The ambulance crew had to stay with her. When she got inside there were no beds so she had to stay in a wheelchair."

of care at hard-pressed hospitals in Harlow and Stevenage Princess Alex 'cannot cope with surging population'

POLITICIANS and doctors have made fresh calls for a new hospital in Harlow as the NHS winter crisis takes hold.

Trust bosses admitted the hospital is no longer fit for purpose and drastic action is needed as the area's population rises.

Dr Curtis Emordi said the facility was originally built to cater for a population of 60,000 but is now being asked to cope with 110,000 people.

Pathways

"People are living longer and we don't have all the social care and all the alternative pathways to deal with it," he said.

"There are GP services and pharmacies but many of them are not 24/7. The difficulty is when people can't access these they come to

A&E."

The trust's chief operating officer Stephanie Lawton said a new hospital was needed.

She added: "We are working hard to develop an outline case for a new hospital."

"We are working with our commissioner to develop an urgent care centre over the next 12 to 18 months."

"That will allow us to move people away from the emergency department."

And Robert Halfon, the MP for Harlow, said Health Secretary Jeremy Hunt had told him the town is top of the list if money for new hospitals becomes available.

He said: "Harlow is at the top of the list to get the right funding if that money becomes available."

'TOP OF THE LIST FOR HOSPITAL FUNDING': Harlow MP Robert Halfon

He also said the trust had faced issues recruiting nurses due to the hospital's proximity to London.

'Patient feedback helps us shape future services'

PATIENT feedback is vitally important in improving A&E services and trust chiefs have urged those who have had a bad experience to let them know.

Nick Carver, the chief executive of Lister Hospital, said: "Clearly sometimes we don't get it right and if we haven't I am sorry for that and please contact us."

"At the end of the day we are here to serve the public and we need to know how to improve."

Vicky Barnes, the emergency department matron at Princess

Alexandra Hospital, also urged patients to get in touch if they have had a bad experience.

"We do take a huge amount of notice of the patient feedback we get," she said.

Complaints

"We have a complaints system which we do reply to and most of the time we can sort it out with a face-to-face meeting and any learning from those is taken very seriously."

"Everyday we give all that feedback to the staff."

'Call pharmacy or GP before trying hospital'

HEALTH bosses have warned that some people who visit A&E do not need to be there.

A spokesman for Lister Hospital said on many occasions the people who wait for the longest at A&E are the patients who did not need to attend in the first place.

And Dr Curtis Emordi from Princess Alexandra Hospital also said many patients did not need to be there - although he said it was a more complicated situation.

"That is definitely the case but sometimes it's difficult to blame those people," he said.

"They need an alternative treatment and if you don't provide a 24/7 service at a GP or a pharmacy those people will end up coming into hospital."

Patients are advised to call the NHS helpline on 111 before making the trip to A&E to check what is the best course of action to take.

■ PARKING

Just who is responsible?

I WOULD like to ask publicly just who is in charge of dealing with people who either park on or over kerbs dropped for a disabled wheelchair user for them to cross the road with relevant safety?

Harlow council say due to cuts the police need to deal with the obstruction and yet the police say it's the council's responsibility due to police cuts!

Too many times I have seen selfish people ignoring the dropped kerbs in Millwards and Malloes Green and all too often a neighbour severely disabled in a wheelchair contacts me to ask for assistance as he is afraid of having to use the road to get to where he needs to go because of the speeding drivers or phone users in our small off-road.

Can someone in the council or police service have the integrity to answer the question...?

Name and address supplied.

■ DEVELOPMENT

Concern over road plans

JOHN Gregory is quite right (Harlow Star, letters January 12) to say the current plans for the M11 junction 7A should be rethought now that the Government has approved the building of 10,000 new homes immediately north of Harlow.

In the same edition you reported the joint statement on that news by Harlow, East Herts, and Epping Forest councils, noting that the funding would enable a strategic team to address issues such as road access to the M11: the leader of East Herts Council was quoted saying it would enable them to 'explore sustainable transport'. Considering what I can recall of that council's views in the past on the northern route from Eastwick to the M11, it would be interesting to hear their interpretation of 'sustainable' - whatever minimises the impact on East Herts roads?

In its reference to a northern bypass, Essex County Council's May 2016 consultation document

■ SQUARE

Shame to see venue closes

AS we read in last week's Star, The Square is set to close forever. How could this internationally acclaimed, iconic venue which has inspired so many young people and launched so many careers come to such a sad demise?

In the end, it seemed nobody except The Square's partners, supporters and staff cared enough. The developers wanted the land to build houses (hardly any of which will be social housing).

The council fought this initially but did not stand its ground when the decision was overturned on appeal.

Contrary to council leader Jon Clempner's statement, the Square partners were not primarily interested in asking for money and certainly didn't need help with its 'business plan', having successfully run The Square for ten years. No, what The Square partners really wanted was for the council to stand shoulder to shoulder with them and use its clout to refuse to let this pointless development happen. For some reason, Jon Clempner and the council failed to act, and now the look and feel of our town will be changed forever.

It is hard to imagine how empty Harlow will feel for many people without The Square. As a recent visiting band said - 'it's great having houses, but where are all the people going to go for a night out?'

Despite claiming yet again that the council's hands are tied because The Square is a 'private business' the reality is very different as Jon Clempner is well aware. The Square's partners worked tirelessly to keep the venue open for ten years, taking no wage, making no personal profit and seeking no reward other than keeping the music scene alive for the town.

Having enriched Harlow for 50 years it is a very sad day indeed to see it come to an end, largely through the failure of Harlow Council to protect our cultural heritage.

Square goes feel huge gratitude towards the partners and staff for valiantly keeping The Square open against all odds.

■ DOG POO

Take your bags home with you

WHILE it's great to see more people cleaning up after their dog/dogs there are still those who then just throw the used bag anywhere, why?

If there isn't a bin nearby then just take it home, surely that's not hard to do, we all have bins at home. Why should the offenders leave it for someone else to do.

■ WELL DONE

Praise for Judge Lynch

IT'S not PC to say well done. But well done - and thank heaven the JCIO did not bow to the scourge of political correctness which protects and supports people like John Hennigan (The Star January 12).

Nobody could possibly condone Judge Lynch's remarks but why should she accept the antisocial behaviour of such a person.

I do hope there are many decent-thinking people who secretly say "well done your Honour!"

Name and address supplied

■ TOWN CENTRE

Who is paying for flowers?

I HAVE to agree with Mr Skinner (Star, January 12).

Walking through the town to the post office I had to laugh at the idea of the needless thousands of pound spending spree by just looking hideously dumped and neglected flower pots in the market. I could see that NO attempt to clean them or the moss has been made, this likewise is the current state of the town in general.

I also have to ask when there is cuts to everything from mental health to hospitals where did this money suddenly come from because Harlow council have created cuts here there and everywhere.

A new garden will not make any difference to the town as it will end up like everything thing else in the town looked after for five minutes and then become burden to the council.

Primary pupils jump to it for first schools' triathlon

Students take on the swimming, cycling and running challenge

By Charlotte Page

charlottepage@hertssexnews.co.uk

THREE primary schools from the Burnt Mill Academy Trust competed in a mini triathlon.

Pupils from Cooks Spinney, Freshwaters and Little Parndon Primary Schools took part in the event, hosted by Burnt Mill Academy and assisted by Burnt Mill Academy sports leader students.

The triathlon began with swimming, where the girls raced first followed by the boys, before they dried off and changed in preparation for the outdoor section.

A cycling course in the playground challenged each competitor to five laps on their bike before they headed off to run around the school field.

The top three girls were Lilian Opiyo from Little Parndon, Shannon Waterman from Freshwaters and Gracie Coburn from Little Parndon.

The top three boys were Hrisian Aunov from Little Parndon, Joseph Williams from Freshwaters and Taylor Burns, also from Freshwaters.

The occasion was the first schools' triathlon however regular events are held during and after school in order to bring together the primary athletes to train, compete and succeed together.

Pride as archaeology group receives GCSE certificates

A GROUP of students from Burnt Mill Academy have received a GCSE in Archaeology from the University of Cambridge.

The students took part in a course which involved spending two days at an archaeological excavation dig in the village of Clavering, followed by a day at Cambridge University to discuss their findings.

They then attended an archaeology lecture before submitting their own reports.

Humanities teacher Miss McDonald said: "The ability and achievement of our pupils never ceases to amaze me. This is another example of how the pupils at Burnt Mill work hard and achieve fantastic results."

She continued: "It also clearly demonstrates how they are setting their sights at the very top, as they now have equivalent grades and experience of working with Cambridge University.

"The Humanities faculty couldn't be prouder of them, well done to all involved."

All 11 students participating received GCSE grades A to C with five individuals obtaining an A grade.

Academy plays host to Finnish students

STEWARDS ACADEMY has hosted a visit of Finnish pupils and teachers of their partner school in Helsinki, Finland.

The partnership between Stewards Academy and Puistola School was established in 2014 and for the past few years, the two schools have been working together to promote internationalism and cultural understanding.

The Finnish pupils, alongside their Year 8 and 9 Stewards hosts, took part in a range of activities both at the school and in trips to London and Cambridge.

Teachers from the partner school had the chance to observe a variety of lessons during their visit and were said to be impressed with the range of teaching styles and quality of work produced by the students.

International dimension co-ordinator, Paul Hickman said: "In just a few short days some firm friendships and shared experiences have been established."

"We look forward to continuing to work with Puistola School in the years to come with more exchange visits and further close co-operation between our two schools."

The staff and pupils of Stewards Academy are looking forward to visiting Helsinki this year.

New M11 junction will put garden town on right road

Minister's hint that 10,000-home development will get green light

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsessexnews.co.uk

THE government has hailed M11 junction 7A as key to delivering Harlow-Gilston Garden Town in making a substantial investment.

The contested junction, which will see country road Gilden Way turned into a three-lane carriage-way, will benefit from a share of a £1.2 billion national investment in roads.

Announcing the fund, set to kick in at the start of the financial year in April, transport minister Andrew Jones said the junction would benefit the proposed garden town.

The planned 10,000-home development, known colloquially as Harlow North, has not yet been signed off but this latest announcement is a strong hint that it will be.

In addition more than £25million has been allocated to fill potholes, improve road safety and cut congestion in Essex.

The county council run Essex Highways will have its coffers filled with a £28.5million investment from central government.

Mr Jones said: "Roads play a significant part in everyday life linking people with jobs and businesses with customers.

"This is why this government is investing record amounts improving and maintaining highways across the country to help motorists.

"The funding we have allocated today is focused on relieving congestion and providing important upgrades to ensure our roads are fit for the future."

The Department for Transport (DfT) will begin a new trial to change the way potholes are managed. The proposed pothole spotter system would see a camera-software system built into refuse vehicles.

Congestion

On the junction 7A prospect a DfT spokesman said: "The scheme will provide better access to the motorway both for residents of Harlow and Sawbridge-worth and less congestion on junction seven.

"The project will be part-funded by Essex County Council and construction could begin in 2019."

From the total Essex kitty, £1.8million will be ploughed into pothole repair. The problem was recently discussed in a Harlow

IN BRIEF

Council plans for waste sites

CONSULTATIONS have started into plans to create 19 waste sites across the county.

As part of Essex County Council's replacement waste local plan, the new sites will be used to steer rubbish away from existing landfill.

There are no plans for a site to be created in Harlow but residents are still asked to participate in the consultation which runs until Thursday, February 16.

Warning after burglars target elderly woman

'Repairs' con men gain entry into house

By William Mata

william.mata@hertsessexnews.co.uk

A WOMAN in her 80s was targeted in a suspected attempted burglary by men posing as shed repairers.

Two men attended a property in Fountain Farm, Harlow, at around 10.30am on Sunday. The first asked the victim if she wanted her shed repaired as another waited outside.

Challenged

The first man proceeded to walk around the house, claiming he was 'just checking' when challenged about what he was doing. Both men then left and nothing appears to have been taken.

Essex Police is now appealing for witnesses and a spokeswoman described the incident as concerning.

The man who walked around the house is described as white, around 5ft 5 tall, of stocky build, aged between 40 and 50, wearing a bobble hat and bomber jacket.

ATTEMPTED BURGLARY: The suspects targeted a house in Fountain Farm, Harlow

DC Rachel Anderson, investigation officer, said: "Given the nature of the offence I am concerned the victim was targeted because of her age.

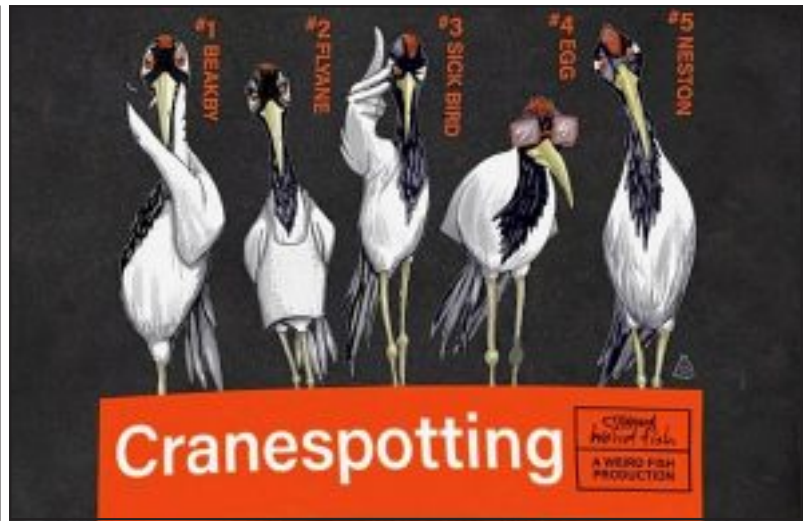

"I am concerned other people who are elderly or vulnerable may also be targeted in the same way and would urge residents in the area to be alert for anyone trying something similar.

"If someone knocks at your door always ask for identification – all genuine callers will have ID and won't mind you asking to see it.

"If you're still not sure, ask them to come back another time and don't feel pressured into letting someone into your home you don't want there."

Anyone with information is asked to call DC Anderson at Harlow Police Station on 101 or Crimestoppers anonymously on 0800 555 111.

UNUSUAL SUSPECTS: Cranes line up in this parody of the Danny Boyle classic Trainspotting, designed by Epping artist Lewis Boughen

Cranespotting design dream comes true for Epping artist

FORGET Renton and Spud, meet Neston and Egg, stars of Cranespotting which is a new t-shirt from Weird Fish.

Epping artist Lewis Boughen designed the top which parodies the poster for cult-classic film Trainspotting ahead of sequel T2, due to be released this month.

Weird Fish held a competition last year for a new design to support the RSPB with some t-shirt sale profits going towards the bird protection charity.

Mr Boughen's Cranespotting was one of three parodies, alongside Purple Crane and Raiders of the Lark, which won the contest after a social media vote.

Impressed

However, Weird Fish was impressed with the two runners-up and decided to add both designs to its limited edition range of t-shirts.

Mr Boughen added: "It is a dream come true to be added to the Weird Fish team of artists.

"The t-shirt is perfect for fans of the Trainspotting saga and the timing couldn't be better as the new movie hits cinema screens in January."

The t-shirt is on sale now for £20, with £5 from each sale donated to the RSPB.

Council tax set to go up by 65p per week

But frontline services in Essex won't be hit by budget

THE RIGHT THING: Councillor John Spence has defended the council tax increase

By Sam Meadows

sam.meadows@hertsessexnews.co.uk

TAXPAYERS in Essex will soon have to fork out as much as 65p a week more in council tax.

Essex County Council (ECC) has unveiled its budget for the forthcoming year and has taken the option to charge residents three per cent more to pay for adult social care.

The budget has been balanced without cuts to frontline services and Councillor John Spence, the authority's cabinet member for finance, pledged this would remain the case in coming years.

And he said the rise in council tax was inevitable given the strain adult social care services are under. "We have a growing population of older people so we know the strain is there and we are clear that the government does need to put more money into this funding stream," he said.

"We had to take this option actually, it was the right thing to do because otherwise we can't argue our corner."

Cllr Spence said the council is spending seven per cent more on adult social care than it was at the start of its administration. And while he stopped short of criticising the government for not providing enough money for social care, he was clear charging taxpayers cannot be the whole solution.

"It's part of the solution and always would have been but it shouldn't be the whole solution," he explained.

"The government needs to look at a more fundamental solution."

The council will also fund the creation of 2,500 school places in the next year – on top of 8,000 which have already been created.

New schools will also be built in Chelmsford and Harlow, with the authority aiming to reach 100 per cent of schools rated 'good' by Ofsted in the near future – the figure is currently 91 per cent.

Protected

On the possibility of future cuts, Cllr Spence admitted the budget was not yet balanced for 2018 and beyond, but pledged frontline services would be protected.

The government will cease funding local authorities by 2020 but has approved ECC's efficiency plan, meaning the settlement will gradually reduce until then.

"People shouldn't be worried," said Cllr Spence. "They should trust that we will continue to find new ways to balance the budget."

"It always gets tougher but we have the talent to do it."

The budget will be discussed by ECC's cabinet on Tuesday before going before full council on February 14.

Cuts will lead to isolation – Labour

THE government has been accused of 'bankrupting' local authorities and creating 'isolation and loneliness' among the elderly.

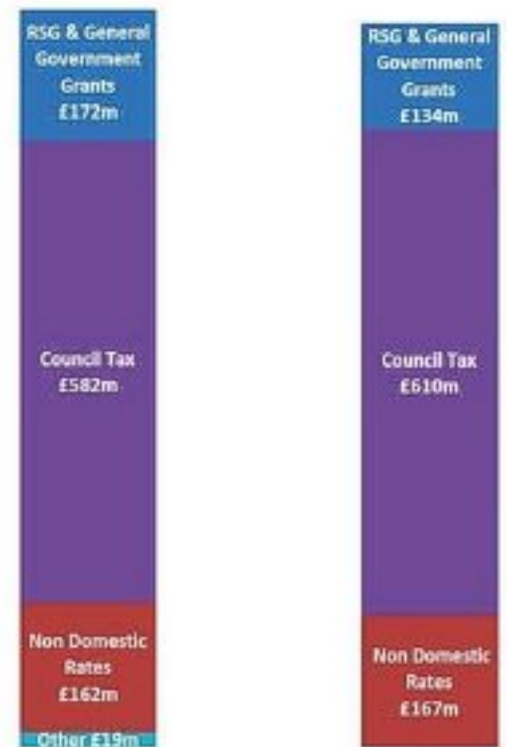

The county's Labour leader Ivan Henderson was responding to Essex County Council's budget announcement on Monday – which included a three per cent rise in council tax to pay for adult social care.

Councillor Mike Mackrory, the leader of the Liberal Democrat group, said the budget would have a 'massive impact' on

County to drop £160k funding to homes service

Councillor's shock at 'savage' cuts to supported housing

By William Mata

william.mata@hertssexnews.co.uk

COUNTY Hall's decision to cut funding for supported housing in Harlow is "savage," according to a town councillor.

Backed by other members of Harlow Labour, Mark Wilkinson blasted Essex County Council for cutting £160,000 from their budget for the accommodation in the town.

But Tory ECC member Dick Madden said consultations are yet to be held into how supported housing will be funded and plans will follow to make sure vulnerable residents will continue to receive support.

The spending plan, which could be approved after a County Hall vote on Wednesday, February 14, was announced on Monday.

Mr Wilkinson, Harlow Council's portfolio holder for housing, said: "We are deeply shocked to learn of this savage cut by the Conservative controlled county council.

"This will affect elderly residents of Harlow, many of whom have lived here for much of the town's 70 year history.

Rely

"Surely the residents who rely on this service and who continue to pay rent and council tax for their homes deserve to live comfortably and with dignity in their own community.

"Instead they face an uncertain future and the possibility of having to become a burden to their families."

The decision follows the closure of Occasio House in Harlow, which supported young people, while the Meals on Wheels service was axed last October.

Eugenie Harvey, who hopes to win the Harlow South seat of Essex County Council at the elections in May, said: "We cannot stand by and allow the Tories in County Hall to make these devastating cuts to services which affect vulnerable Harlow residents."

Essex County Council is not the only provider of supported housing, and Mr Madden argued it is therefore unfair to say there will no longer be any provision.

The cabinet member for adults and children said: "It is not true we are cutting all funding for housing related support.

"That is because there are a range of providers including district, borough and city councils running these services.

"We are consulting with them on changes so we can make sure we are making the best use of limited and shrinking resources, but at the same time make sure that those who really need support continue to receive it."

SHOCKED: Mark Wilkinson said he was not happy with the county council's budget plan

Armed pair stole from a teenager

A TEENAGER was forced to hand over his coat, keys and cash by two knife-wielding men.

The male victim, aged in his late teens, was approached by two men holding knives who threatened him in Monkswick Road, Harlow, at around midnight on Friday, January 6.

The suspects then stole his black North Face puffer jacket which contained house keys, identification and £20 cash.

After taking the coat, the men then got into a taxi and headed in the direction of Howard Way.

The suspects are both described as black and of a skinny build. They wore dark coloured hoodies.

One suspect is described as being aged between 25 and 30 and around 6ft 3ins. The other suspect is aged between 18 and 25 and around 5ft 5ins.

Autism play has impact

A FORCEFUL play about a man and his autistic son returns to Harlow this month after a successful nationwide tour.

Real-life wrestler Steve Hannam is thrown about in a ring on stage in Living With Luke, which tells his true story of facing up to his boy's autism, a rival he can never fully defeat.

Two years after performing in front of an appreciative crowd at Burnt Mill Academy, the cast will perform at Church Langley Community Primary School on Friday, January 27 at 7.30pm.

Steve, 48, who lives in Harlow, said: "We finished the tour in November. It was very successful and we are hoping it will be bigger this time."

In the Paul T Davies' directed adaptation, Steve performs as alter-ego Danson Thunderbolt and the show begins in full wrestling mode before the back story is told.

Luke's autism makes it difficult for his father to communicate and build a relationship with him and the struggle is told through drama and wrestling.

The play separates Luke (who is played by Ben Maytham) from the autism, which is represented by another wrestler (Phil Powers) who takes any opportunity to throw Steve around.

The pair fight intermittently throughout to mimic their real-life clashes. The show is designed to raise awareness of autism and is being held in conjunction with Harlow charity PACT for Autism.

feedback we had was quite amazing. It has had a really good impact, people are still very interested.

"We chose to do Church Langley because that was Luke's school growing up and a lot of staff who knew him are still there now."

Thirty-seven years after the Newtown Neurotics played The Square for the first time frontman Steve Drewett is looking ahead to their final performance...

We created a culture at The Square – it was a rich scene

THE Newtown Neurotics will support Eddie and the Hot Rods on Saturday, January 28 for what will be the last night of entertainment at The Square before it closes.

The Fourth Avenue venue is very close to the trio's frontman Steve Drewett's heart, as he not only met his wife there but it helped propel the politically-engaged rockers to the big time.

The 62-year-old, who still lives in Harlow, said: "We are in the unique position, alongside Richard Holgarth and the Hot Rods, as musicians who have played in The Square at the beginning and are now going to be one of the last playing."

"I remember what it was like before The Square and when it closes that is what we go back to. We were a band who needed to play live and there was nowhere in Harlow at all."

"We got a following because we played in Bishop's Stortford all the time. We could not play in Harlow as the town hall, as it was called then, did not have the space. Bars did not want a punk band."

"When The Square came it was a godsend as now we had something on our doorstep. We got a scene going, it was remarkable."

"We created a culture. It was a very rich scene of playing. Young people came and started to form bands, becoming musicians."

Tickets have already sold out for The Square's last gig (which will also feature The Orphans) before contractors take over the site to build houses.

For the lucky couple of hundred to have bought a ticket it may be the last gig they see in a while with no replacement venue having been announced.

The Newtown Neurotics formed in Harlow in the late 1970s and the first time they played at The Square was in 1980.

After disbanding eight years later, Steve reformed the band in 2006.

Steve, on vocals and guitar, is now joined by original member Simon Lomond on drums and bassist Adam Smith, who came on board in 2007.

The frontman said The Square was more a community than a venue and punters would become involved in the sound and lighting side.

Community

"People used to turn up for the first time as a punter and would end up working there," Steve continued. "They became part of the community."

"For us we became nationally known, we appeared on the John Peel Show. If The Square had not been there none of that would have happened. It was my home away from home."

The band released prolifically in the 1980s and became famous for their politically charged lyrics behind tracks such as Kick Out the Tories and Mindless Violence. Steve estimates he has played several hundred times at The Square, including numerous solo shows.

While his career continues to blossom he considers it vital that such a venue has a place in the town to help bring through the next generation of musicians.

He added: "It is a concern of mine for a number of reasons. Clearly it is important to this town, but also to this nation as we see venues closing left, right and centre."

"There is a tendency now to not value music. Young people are missing out on an experience. They are watching The X Factor and may watch a concert through a virtual reality headset."

"With that you lose that sense of community. Being in the middle of an audience is something you cannot replicate, that real emotion."

The Square's future is still uncertain with no new venue yet announced. Steve said that although performing somewhere else would be strange, it is a necessity.

"It would be different but it would be good. You can't stop change."

"I am worried there would be no equivalent. That is my main concern. Once the Neurotics have finished it would be nice to go out and see the latest new talent."

"It is the small venues that are stepping stones that allow acts to become mega-stars."

Steve said the Neurotics are as busy as ever, and are currently writing new material with an eye on a documentary film.

It is now approaching 11 years since Steve reformed the band, making their 2.0 a longer-serving outfit than their original incarnation, who were together from 1979 to 1988.

Saying goodbye to The Square is an emotional venture for the guys, no-one more so than bass-player Adam who is part of SquareOne Management.

However, Steve is conscious that he does not want to steal the thunder from Eddie and the Hot Rods, the band they are officially supporting.

The trio has already played a gig to say goodbye to The Square, when they thought it was going to close at the end of 2015.

Steve added: "We said goodbye to The Square the first time round - we did all the farewell gigs. We said if there was a support slot available on the final night we would play for the last time."

"There is a rock family tree in The Square (which maps out connections between Harlow bands to have played the venue over the years) and we are at the top, we are the constant that has been there all the way through."

"So in a way it is fitting that we are on the bill to say goodbye."

Six bedrooms... and a fire breathing dragon

It is likely that the estate agent brochure for Grade II listed Gyrn Castle is an industry one-off, given its unusual list of features.

As well as crenelated ramparts, two towers, hidden staircases, wood panelling, suits of armour plus a flagpole the property features a large wooden fire-breathing dragon carved from a single tree.

The property offers stunning views over the local countryside and has been a home, film location and a party and wedding venue for several years since it was refurbished and remodelled in 1994.

The basic outline of the property was built between 1817 and 1824 by a cotton baron who then sold it on to Liverpool shipping magnate John Douglas, who used the property's elevated position over the Dee Estuary as a lookout to spot his vessels returning to port, it is claimed.

The current owners, who are relatives of Douglas, say the property would be an ideal venue for a music festival because it comes with 2,000 acres of land.

It's in rural Flintshire with excellent road links to Liverpool, Chester and Manchester and has six bedrooms, two reception rooms, a dining room, kitchen with walk-in pantry and several outbuildings including a three-car garage.

The property is soon to be auctioned via Elstree, Hertfordshire-based company Lot11.co.uk with a guide price of £2.875 million, although last year it was rumoured to have been nearly bought by newly-installed Manchester United manager Jose Mourinho.

Designer pile goes into extra time for Sol

WHAT happens if you're a millionaire ex-footballer married to an interior designer?

The answer can be found if you visit Hallington Hall, a nine-bedroom historic pile currently being sold by Sol Campbell and wife Fiona Barratt, who is the grand-daughter of Barratt Homes founder Sir Lawrence Barratt.

The pair bought the property in 2009 just before he signed a one-year contract with Newcastle United, although Fiona also has family ties in the area and was keen to set up shop in Northumberland.

After moving in she set about expensively renovating the old pile which was built in 1768 for industrialist Ralph Soulsby.

Grade II listed Hallington Hall comes with 60 acres of formal gardens, woodland and grasslands as well as three reception rooms, a family kitchen room, study, gym, tennis court, three cottages and several outbuildings.

Campbell is not the only famous sportsman in the area – former footballer and manager Alan Shearer plays golf at a nearby course and former Olympic athlete Steve Cram lives locally too.

It's not known why Sol and Fiona are selling up, but it's said that he wants to move to London and cultivate a political career within the Conservative Party. It was rumoured that he just missed becoming the party's mayoral candidate during the recent London elections.

■ Hallington Hall is for sale at £4.95 million with estate agent Savills (01668 281 611) although the property was originally offered for £1m more before the couple reduced its price to sell.

An apartment in celebrity central

IF YOU fancy literally rubbing shoulders with the rich, powerful and famous then head for Albany House, an extraordinary block of flats featured in several famous novels that has also been a celebrity hangout for over two hundred years.

The property, which is off Piccadilly in central London, is currently home to actor Terence Stamp and photographer Lord Snowdon but has also hosted a long line of famous names including former prime minister Edward Heath, author Graham Greene, politician Alan Clark and novelist Aldous Huxley.

It's also featured in several famous books, including Our Friends Mutual by Charles Dickens.

The Albany was built in 1774 as a mansion for a debauched but blue-blooded family before being redeveloped into 69 smaller 'chambers' in 1803 and described by Country Life magazine as 'one of London's most exclusive addresses'.

When a reporter from The Independent was invited in more recently he was less kind, calling it a haunt of 'superannuated fops'.

Fortnum & Mason is your nearest grocer, Berry Brothers your local wine shop and, should you require entertainment, Soho and the West End are next door.

Until recently apartment could only be sold to people vetted by a committee while pets, children and photography are still not allowed inside, rules that are policed by porters who not that long ago wore top hats and tails. It's all very Downton Abbey.

■ Agents Strutt & Parker (020 7235 9959) has a two-bedroom, one reception room apartment for sale within the building on a 20-year lease for £1.35m.

NEW USE: An unused bookcase is ideal for storing bathroom accessories and looks great too

Bathtime blues?

Lesley Taylor explains how to make a splash with a bathroom makeover that doesn't break the bank...

BATHROOM renovations command quite the price tag – ranging from around £2,500 up to £6,000 and beyond.

For the average Joe or Joanne, this isn't small change, especially after all the expense of the festive season. But it doesn't have to be this way, and you don't have to put up with a damp, dark and lacklustre bathing space that offers little in the way of practicality.

Here's how to style your bathroom, beautifully, without a major renovation and with plenty of functionality.

Get creative with key items

A bookcase serves a dual purpose of storing bathroom items in a beautiful and creative manner, while a screen separator can act as a focal point while cleverly dividing up key areas within the bathroom space. For a touch of vintage chic, check out your local antique, bric-a-brac or reclaimed furniture store – but think laterally, don't restrict yourself with a dead-set idea; often the most perfect pieces of furniture are those that you wouldn't find in the bathroom section of DIY stores.

Add a little greenery

Create the look of luxury by opting for a neutral colour palette teamed with natural materials such as slate, wood or stone. Add interest by bringing the greenery of the outdoors in, albeit in an unconventional way. Plants that are well suited to bathroom humidity and low levels of light include bamboo, orchids, snake plants, the aloe plant and spider plants. What's more, these plants aren't only for aesthetic purposes, as they can purify the air and make your home a healthier environment in which to live.

Get dramatic

Overhauling your colour scheme is just about the most effective way of renovating your bathroom without a spending a fortune. For a big impact change, choose to brighten up throughout with an airy white or monochrome palette – with pale bases you really have free reign for any accessories you introduce and the brighter and bolder, the better.

On the opposite side of the spectrum, you may want to go dark and dramatic with a deep grey, purple or blue hue; for contrast, add splashes and flashes of brightly coloured accessories throughout your dark colour base.

Be untraditional

Want to know the secret behind magazine-worthy bathrooms? They all opt for certain elements of the non-traditional. Be inspired by innovative uses of free or incredibly cheap materials, consider how you could refresh old furniture or fixtures and discover ideas for up-cycling on Pinterest.

Imposing artwork

Artwork is a key trend that we're going to be seeing more of in the upcoming year, and for those with tiles or paper that could really benefit from being hidden away, this may well be an ideal solution if you can't afford to overhaul your wall coverings.

Choose artwork that complements the colour of the wall onto which it's placed, brighten a neutral base with a collage of bright and bold artwork that 'pops' or go big and imposing with artwork that covers a wall almost in its entirety.

NEW APPROACH: Search your home for unused furniture that could make a huge impact within your existing bathroom

LIFE: Add colour to a neutral palette with a luscious plant

TOP TIPS

1. Look to existing furnishings around the home for that new bathroom accessory
2. Reasonably-priced additions, such as imposing plants, can have a big impact
3. Add drama with a bold new colour scheme
4. Invest in some bright accessories that will draw attention away from tired features
5. Artwork in the bathroom is huge; with everything from postcards to poster prints earning plenty of style points

By Edward Stephens

HONDA has always been at the forefront of car technology and design – but sometimes you can be too far ahead.

And so it was when the Japanese car maker launched the original HR-V back in 1999, well before the trend for crossovers and SUVs was even thought of.

It didn't sell in large numbers and was eventually phased out ten years ago.

But now a new generation HR-V is back and now the timing is right because compact crossovers are all the rage – think Renault Kadjar and Nissan Juke.

And the car that started it all is determined to take sales from its competitors to make up for lost time. It's already been voted New Car of the Year by dealers in the prestigious AM trade magazine's annual awards.

The latest HR-V is designed for drivers who want a crossover but don't want the bulk of the Nissan Qashqai or even the HR-V's bigger brother the Honda CR-V.

But despite the relatively small outside dimensions this newcomer offers plenty of interior space for four, or five if you are happy to be up close and intimate in the back.

There's plenty of luggage room too thanks to a very deep boot which doesn't have the fuel tank underneath it to take up space.

That has been moved under the front seats – just like on the Honda Jazz.

The similarities don't end there because the HR-V also has Honda's 'magic seats' – created originally for the Jazz – which means a multiplicity of folding permutations as well as seat squabs which fold up like cinema seats to allow you to pack in large items across the width of the car, like a mountain bike or furniture for example.

Like most Hondas this one comes well equipped, particularly if you sample the top of the range EX model as I did.

Standard features on this flagship include leather seats – heated in the front, a panoramic opening glass sunroof, satellite navigation, rear view colour camera, LED headlights and roof rails.

The car is available with either a 1.5-litre petrol engine or – as on the car that I drove – Honda's super frugal 120bhp 1.6-litre diesel.

This engine was originally developed for the Civic and proved to be so good it was decided to offer it in the CR-V and now the HR-V.

It's one of the few engines that I have tried that actually will live up to the manufacturer's claimed average fuel consumption.

Honda says it will average 68.9 in the HR-V and I managed, with careful driving to average a very close 62mpg.

At the same time it's quite a spirited engine in this model offering lively, enjoyable acceleration. In this instance it's mated to a slick, super smooth six-speed manual gearbox that's a delight to use.

On the road the HR-V is a surprisingly quiet, refined and smooth car to drive. It's also very agile, with a small turning circle which makes it easy to park.

There's little body roll on corners and while the steering is sharp it's also a little on the light side.

Sharp also describes the exterior styling of the car which at first glance you take for a coupe as the rear doors are not immediately obvious because the handles are built into the window frame.

The new generation HR-V has been a long time coming but this time Honda bosses have made sure they have got it right.

OVER THE BAR: Alex Read goes close for Harlow Town

Quick goals, scupper fans' glory dreams

HARLOW'S FA Trophy adventure came to an end in front of a bumper crowd at The Harlow Arena, as two goals in quick succession helped York City to a 2-1 win.

Harlow had given a good account of themselves, but missed opportunities in the first period came back to haunt the Hawks and the Minstermen advanced to the third round.

The first period was as a tight encounter with Harlow having the best of the opening chances.

Jared Small's driven cross was almost reached by Alex Read, but Daniel Parslow's defensive header took it away from the striker.

Small burst into the box and cut inside to create space for the shot, but a perfectly-timed sliding block from Sean Newton put the effort out for a corner.

Amari Morgan-Smith had a gilt-edged chance to put the visitors ahead, but when he collected a cross inside the box in acres of space, he sent the ball wide of the post.

Mario Noto's through-ball cut open the York City defence to create the best chance of the game so far, but goalkeeper Kyle Letheren was out quickly to deny Small with his legs.

The Minstermen had been increasing the pressure throughout the second half, and the breakthrough came on 77 minutes.

A corner was headed down in the goal area and Morgan-Smith was in the right place to convert from close range.

Just three minutes later the Minstermen doubled the lead. A defensive lapse from the home side gifted possession to Heslop, who smashed home from ten yards out.

Read, making his 200th appearance for the club, pulled a goal back for Harlow on 90 minutes to set-up a nervy finish.

A long throw into the box fell to the striker who bundled the ball home. But it was too late for the hosts however, who would rue their missed opportunities.

The Hawks returned to Ryman Premier League action on Tuesday night, going down 2-1 at home to Lowestoft Town.

Hawks boss: City's fitness was crucial

Chapman proud of show against ex-League side

By Matt Storey

DANNY CHAPMAN felt York City's fitness showed as they beat his Harlow Town side 2-1 in the second round of the FA Trophy on Saturday.

The Minstermen were only relegated from the Football League last season and the Hawks more than matched the Vanarama National League side for 75 minutes, before Amari Morgan-Smith and Simon Heslop handed York control of the tie.

Alex Read netted a consolation goal in the 90th minute, and Chapman was proud of his players for their performance.

"If you watched up to 75 minutes you would never have said there were two divisions between the teams," Chapman told the club's official website.

"We competed well and in the first half we had the better opportunities. It could have been 2-0 at the break, although they had one chance at the back post that they should have scored.

"In the middle of the second half the fitness levels started to show, they're a full time side so you'd expect it.

"Once they scored the two goals, we got another burst and could have easily finished level.

Time

"I'm proud of them. They've stood up to York. I know they're bottom of the National League now, but this time last year they were in the Football League and they are a Football League club for me.

"We've got take to everything we can from the game and look forward to our upcoming league games."

Saturday's game saw the return of Junior Dadson for his first appearance of the season, coming off the bench for the final 20 minutes.

Chapman was delighted the winger could return from his lengthy injury lay-off.

The Hawks boss added: "He has been out for so long it's like having a new signing.

"He's only played a couple of U21 games but I thought that maybe bringing him on he could give us something else, a bit of Dadson magic so to speak.

"He did well but the main thing is that we get him back to 100 per cent match fitness. So that he's injury free and he's not got problems. It's just about him getting match sharpness back."

Chapman also gave an update on striker Read, who handed in a transfer request two weeks ago.

"That remains to be seen," he explained. "I can state that I don't want him to go and the club don't want him to go. There are reasons why he wants to go that are between the club and Alex.

"Unfortunately that's the way it's going to be. We'll sit down this week and go from there."

Club is hoping warriors plan will attract women

HARLOW Rugby Club are encouraging women to unleash their inner warrior by attending their free taster session as part of England Rugby's new nationwide campaign.

Launched this month, the Meet Your Inner Warrior campaign will see clubs across the country stage special sessions to encourage more women and girls to challenge themselves through rugby.

The free Warrior Camps are fun and informal, teaching basic skills and drills, and giving women the chance to play rugby in the hope they will embrace the sport and join a local club.

Harlow will host their event on Saturday January 21 from 10am through to midday with an open taster session aimed for all women wanting to give rugby a try. It will be one of 100 Warrior Camps run by clubs across the country from January 19-29 with the sessions aimed at women between 18 and 35.

The RFU is asking women to break out of their comfort zone by playing rugby, and comes on the back of the organisation wanting to continue to grow women's involvement in the sport further despite achieving it's legacy ambition objective of getting 25,000 women in England playing contact rugby.

Steve Grainger, RFU Rugby Development Director said: "We set ourselves an ambitious target when launching our women and girls strategy in 2014; to get 25,000 women participating in contact rugby.

"Despite the ever-growing appetite for the sport that we have witnessed through achieving our target one year ahead of schedule, we know there is still work to be done to ensure women are aware of the opportunities out there for them to participate in rugby. The upcoming Warrior Camps are a great chance for newcomers or returning players to take part in the sport through a fun and informal session."

Anyone interested in attending the Pitch Up and Play Warrior Camp event should bring trainers and usual workout gear.
